SCRIPT FOR EMPLOYEES THAT WILL HAVE A POSITION IN THE SALES ORGANIZATION

The industry's new pricing structure has changed the way we will conduct our business activities in the future. Our eamings for 1993 will be reduced $900 million. The sales management team has spent the past several weeks working through a process to determine the most efficient sales organization that will allow us to achieve our business objectives. As a part of this process, Managers were asked to evaluate the relative performance of their employees. The process was carefully reviewed to ensure our approach to this painful task was fair to all employees. The changes in our business require us to eliminate some field sales positions.

Earlier this morning, we completed the painful process of terminating the employment of some of our colleagues. This has been done as a result of RJR's changing business needs. I will not discuss or answer any questions about those who were terminated.

Through this transition period, we will all need to:

(1) Project a positive attitude
(2) Promote teamwork
(3) Maintain a focused approach

Sales Reps will continue to make retail calls currently assigned, and DM will assign any accounts in vacant territories that will require coverage until the realignment has been completed.

PREPARING FOR THE TERMINATION MEETING

Being well prepared for the termination meeting is critical. Not only will it help you to be more effective in handling the employee who is leaving, it will ease your anxiety and reduce the chances of litigation. The following aspects of preparation need careful attention:

- TIME AND LOCATION OF THE MEETING: Arrange for a private business setting.
- SEVERANCE INFORMATION: You will want to be clear with the employee about the severance benefits they will be receiving as soon as they are ready to listen. Do not attempt to explain the details of the severance program.
- SECURITY ISSUES: Follow Guidelines For Collecting Company Assets.
- STRUCTURING NEXT STEPS: Coordinate Out Placement meetings with appropriate people. The Benefits Department will correspond with the employee at the appropriate time.
- UTILIZE ATTACHED SCRIPTS: For severed employees and employees that will have a position, know what you will say about the action being taken, the reason, when and how it will happen.
- ANTICIPATING REACTIONS: Practice dealing with the stress of anger, shock, denial, and silence so that you know what traps to avoid.
- PREPARING YOURSELF EMOTIONALLY: Telling another human being they no longer have a job isn't easy or comfortable for most people. It is natural to feel anxious, awkward, inadequate, or guilty about being the bearer of that news. Expecting discomfort and accepting it is part of the preparation. So is the script planning because it allows you to deliver the message in the most professional and humane way possible.

51843 0527

CONDUCTING THE TERMINATION MEETING

Once you have completed the preparation steps, there are three aspects to conducting a termination meeting:

- Deliver the message
- Managing reactions
- Structuring next steps (explain that DBM will be providing out placement services)

DELIVERING THE MESSAGE

Do's
- Invite the person to sit down
- Get right to the point
- Be clear about the action taken
- State why, what, and when

Don'ts
- Say "Good Morning, good to see you"
- Use humor
- Be apologetic
- Engage in small talk

MANAGE REACTIONS

Do's
- Listen
- Wait for employee response
- Restate message if necessary
- Keep to the script
- Provide structure

Don'ts
- Defend, argue, justify
- Discuss other employees
- Use platitudes or gratuitous comments
- Try to minimize/offer false hope
- Make promises you can't keep
- Allow the meeting to drag on unnecessarily

STRUCTURE NEXT STEPS

Do's
- Clarify official separation date
- Tell employee to review separation package. If clarification is requested, employee should contact the Personnel Department
- Explain logistics for leaving the Company
- Close and notify the employee about the DBM Out Placement Service

TERMINATION INTERVIEW GUIDELINES

By following these guidelines, the termination interview will be conducted in the most professional and humane way possible:

1. Get to the point quickly

   It is a great mistake to spend time trying to build rapport by making small talk. Most people will have anticipated the purpose of the meeting. Start out the conversation with an introductory statement like: "Bill, I have something I must discuss with you." Then move quickly into the specifics.

2. State the reason for the change

   People will dwell at length in their mind for the answer to the question, "Why me?" Ensure that the person's self-esteem is not hurt any more than possible. Give a clear and concise answer, in general terms, of the reason(s) for the termination. Your answer should focus on the factors of organizational needs, relative job performance, and length of service. Avoid discussing or debating specific details that are likely to cause the meeting to deteriorate into an argumentative or defensive discussion or debate.

   Note: This is not the time to discuss the specific reasons for any decision. If the employee insists on an answer to the question, "Why me?", you simply tell the employee that this is not the time to discuss it, but that you will be happy to make an appointment at a more appropriate time.

   Under no circumstances should you discuss personnel actions affecting any other employees.

3. Be clear on the actions being taken

   As a result of the emotion involved, people frequently don't fully hear or understand what is happening to them. It is not uncommon for people to leave the interview without realizing they have been terminated. For this reason, be certain the individual completely understands the decision that has been made.

4. Don't get defensive

   This is probably the most important, yet the most difficult guideline of all. If you allow yourself to defend and argue the decision or rationale, you will destroy the entire conversation and cut off effective communication. Even though you may have been a part of the decision, remember that your role is not to defend the decision. Your role is to communicate management's decision to the employee.

5. Avoid platitudes and promises

   Never say something like "This really isn't the worst thing that could happen to you," or something similar, since on this day, this is probably the worst thing that could happen to the person! Also, avoid giving false hope to people that things will be better in time and they will be back where they were -- since you don't really now.

51843 0529

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/rnbp0000

6. Explain Company support

Briefly explain the support offered by the Company. Do not go into great depth, as the person will not "hear" much of what you are saying. Give the person the severance package so that they can review it at a later date.

7. Provide structure

Not only are people emotional during these conversations, but they generally feel out of control because they are not sure what they should do next. Explain that the Company has contracted with Drake Beam Morin to provide them with out placement services, and a representative will be contacting the employee.

8. Don't allow the meeting to drag on unnecessarily

You should keep in mind that the objectives of the meeting are straightforward:

(1) To clearly communicate the message
(2) To manage reactions
(3) To communicate Company support
(4) To structure and move to the next steps

While remaining sensitive and compassionate, you should avoid allowing the meeting to drag on into a discussion or debate of specific issues, by the employee, which attempts to dispute, avoid, or undo the decision that has been made. This will simply hinder or delay the employee in dealing with the realities of the situation. While not always true, generally, the longer the meeting goes on, the more likely it is to become counter-productive.

SCRIPT FOR SEPARATION MEETING

The industry's new pricing structure has changed the way we will conduct our business activities in the future. Our earnings for 1993 will be reduced $900 million. The sales management team has spent the past several weeks working through a process to determine the most efficient sales organization that will allow us to achieve our business objectives. As a part of this process, Managers were asked to evaluate the relative performance of their employees. The process was carefully reviewed to ensure our approach to this painful task was fair to all employees. The changes in our business require us to eliminate some field sales positions, and I regret to tell you that, effective today, your job is being eliminated.

As this process continues, there may be vacancies within the Sales Area for which you may be considered, if you are interested. Consideration for such vacancies will be based on seniority and you will be contacted to determine your interest if such vacancies occur.

To assist you in managing the transition out of RJR, we are offering you a special separation package which includes continuation of pay and benefits for a period of time, in addition to career transition assistance. This package is conditional upon your signing the SBC Letter Agreement which includes a release of claims against the Company. Here is your package and a list of contacts in the Human Resources Department. Please read over this material at home and feel free to call any of the individuals on the contact list if you have questions.

You have twenty-one (21) days to consider whether to sign the SBC Letter Agreement, and you are advised to consult an attorney before signing. If you decide to sign, please sign the copy where provided on the last page and return it to Paul Macksood in the Sales and Marketing Personnel Department. If your signed agreement is not received by Mr. Macksood within 30 days of your release date, the Company will assume that you do not wish to participate in the SBC Program.

You will be contacted by a representative from Drake, Beam and Morin who will review their career transition services with you. DBM will be in contact with you within 48 hours.

LISTEN:
Allow employee to respond. Be objective and empathetic. Typical responses from employees are:

- Acceptance
- Shock
- Anger
- Fear
- Denial and Controlled Response

Note: This is not the time to discuss the specific reasons for any decision. If the employee insists on an answer to the question, "Why me?", you should simply tell the employee that this is not the time to discuss it, but that you will be happy to make an appointment at a more appropriate time.

Under no circumstances should you discuss personnel actions affecting any other employees.

COMPANY ASSETS:
Collecting Company assets is the last step of the meeting. You, or a designated manager will leave the meeting and collect all Company assets (Guidelines attached to implementation packet).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

It is extremely important to provide correct and consistent answers to questions posed by terminated employees. Consequently, any questions related to benefits, salaries, unemployment compensation, or any questions to which you are unsure of the answers, should be referred to a Personnel representative.

QUESTION: Why was I selected? Who made the final decision? On what basis was the evaluation made? Was I considered for other positions? Do you think there will be any opportunities for me at a later date?

ANSWER: The selection was made by Management with Personnel approval and was based on a number of factors, including organizational needs, job performance, and length of service.

Note: This is not the time to discuss the specific reasons for any decision. If the employee insists on an answer to the question, "Why me?", you simply tell the employee that this is not the time to discuss it, but that you will be happy to make an appointment at a more appropriate time.

Under no circumstances should you discuss personnel actions affecting any other employees.

QUESTION: What recourse do I have?

ANSWER: First of all, you should understand that this process has been carefully reviewed and approved by Management and Personnel to ensure its fairness; however, you are always free to use the open door process to address any concerns you may have.

QUESTION: Can I continue to work for a period of time?

ANSWER: No. We encourage you to utilize your time exploring other employment opportunities.

QUESTION: Can I be considered for re-employment with the Company in the future?

ANSWER: Yes, you are free to apply for any vacancy for which the Company may be hiring in the future.

QUESTION: Will you write a letter of recommendation for me?

ANSWER: By policy, the Company limits release of personal information to external requesters. Personnel will provide you with information regarding the type of information which you can elect to have released.

QUESTION: May I take my salary continuance in a lump sum?

ANSWER: No. Salary continuance will be provided in the form of salary.

TYPES OF REACTIONS TO EXPECT

When people experience involuntary job changes and termination, they usually react in one of the following ways:

- CONSTRUCTIVE/REALISTIC: If there is a "normal" reaction to bad news, it is characterized by expressions of anger, hurt, or disappointment, by listening to your message, and by probing for answers to questions. This is the most rational of the four reaction patterns we discuss.

  In responding to this type of reaction, it is helpful to listen, to provide structure, and to be clear on the next steps.

- ANGER: People sometimes allow their emotions to take over and they become angry and aggressive, possibly attacking you or the Company.

  With this type of reaction, the temptation is to become defensive or argumentative, neither of which diffuses the employee's reaction. It is important to allow the person to express their anger, to acknowledge that you hear them, and yet to continue to remain calm. In time, the person will calm down and start asking questions like, "What are my options?" Once the person starts asking questions like this, you know you have turned the corner and can deal with the individual in a rational way.

- SHOCK: Some people show evidence of shock, confusion, uncertainty, or passivity by appearing not to react at all. This type of reaction may convey that they cannot really handle the situation, and that they need some guidance.

  In such situations, it is important to ask questions to make sure the person heard the message. Don't be afraid to use silence to allow the person to absorb what you have said. Be sure to let the appropriate person from your Human Resources Department or your DBM consultant know about any reactions that seem unusual to you.

- DENIAL/CONTROLLED: Some people react with a "smooth" or anticipated response. This reaction is tricky because people imply that they have anticipated the bad news and seem almost relieved, yet they may really be avoiding dealing with the gravity of the news. By avoiding the situation, these people are often the ones in the most danger. They don't express their upset, and instead, lie to themselves for as long as they can. Eventually, they may become extremely distraught.

  For this reaction, it is important to make sure the person heard the message and understands when the action will be taken.

CAREER TRANSITION SERVICES FOR ENTRY LEVEL MANAGERS, SALES REPS, SECRETARIES

- As part of the "turnkey" process, a DBM consultant will contact the separated RJR employee and describe the career transition services that RJR has purchased for him or her. As part of the termination package, the RJR employee will have been alerted to expect this call and will have received an outline of the services to be provided.

- The DBM consultant will describe the services and offer to meet the candidate locally, at an appropriate facility, for eight hours of consultation, training and resume preparation. If the RJR candidate agrees to this, the following will take place:

  - DBM consultant gets candidate to agree to prepare assignments in advance of the meeting.
  - RJR candidate is mailed a job search manual and instructions for pre-work.
  - DBM consultant arranges for local facility, arrives on agreed date and delivers 8 hours of job search training and consultation as well as development of rough draft of a resume.
  - Consultant assists candidate in completing a "job lead bank" access sheet. (DBM's job lead bank is a computerized database of over 20,000 open jobs, indexed by industry, function, geography and compensation level).
  - Consultant advises of toll-free number for 30 days of ongoing job search consultation.
  - RJR candidate initiates calls to toll-free consultation.
  - DBM contacts RJR candidate after thirty days for final status report.

If the one-on-one consultation not acceptable to the RJR candidate, the DBM consultant offers a toll free telephone training and consulting option featuring the following:

- As assigned DBM consultant who will guide the RJR candidate through the nine modules of DBM's job search manual over a multiple series of calls.

- Resume is developed and 100 copies sent.

- Candidate given access to "job lead bank" and leads are sent.

- RJR candidate requested to complete evaluation sheet.

- Toll free access to consultation for thirty days after formal training completed.

- Contract initiated by DBM at end of 30 days to assess status and report to RJR.

COORDINATING 1993/1994 MANPOWER PLANS

Individual Employees
Disposition of Company Assets

Guidelines

I. Handheld Returns

Return all unused handhelds, modems, and chargers to Fastech, with a cover letter indicating these are "spare" RJR handhelds to:

Fastech
450 Parkway Drive
Broomall, PA 19008
Attn: Service Center Depot

If a "returned" handheld is being retained in the Division, contact Vanessa Perry (ext. 6113) and let her know the handheld is being used as a spare or is being reassigned.

II. Field Sales Operating Funds (FSOF)

Verify that the FSOF balance per the employee agrees with the amount recorded in the Sales Expense System (SES). Any difference should be resolved immediately.

TRANSFERS: Complete Form 6217A (FSOF Transfer Request and Receipt) and send to Sales Finance in Home Office. Verify beginning fund balances in SES of the transferee and the transferor.

REDUCTIONS: Complete Form 6217B (FSOF Reduction Request and Receipt) for each employee's FSOF reductions. Obtain a check from each employee for the amount of reduction. Verify each employee's beginning balance in SES.

51843 0538

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/rnbp0000

OUTSTANDING EXPENSE REPORTS: Although a terminated employee may have an outstanding expense report, a check for the entire FSOF should be obtained, and the expense report entered, as usual, in the Field. If this is not an option and the expense report will need to be used for the FSOF reimbursement, the expense report(s) should be attached to Form 6217B and submitted to Sales Finance. Form 6217B should be completed showing only the amount of the check/cash received as the reduction, and the remainder as the FSOF current balance. When the expense report is processed, it will be used to offset any outstanding FSOF balance.

For terminated employees with a personal mileage deduction, this information should be communicated to Dot Draper in Sales Personnel (ext. 2339) immediately so this deduction will be taken on their last paycheck. If any of these expense reports are entered by the Division office, please make sure the personal miles are not entered. If the expense report is sent to Sales Finance for entry, please circle the personal miles in red and note that this information was communicated to Dot Draper.

NOTE: It is strongly suggested that any FSOF reductions for terminated employees be paid by cashiers check rather than personal checks. The cost of the cashiers check can be charged up by the Manager on their expense report. Any fund shortages that occur at the time of termination should be reported immediately, by phone, to Sales Personnel (Dot Draper, ext. 2339) who will then notify Sales Finance.

III. Drafts

Employees:

Obtain list of all drafts assigned to employees from TPS (use TPS inquiry function book assignment by employee) and have draft books returned for all terminated employees (have $5,000 and $500 books).

Verify that all "used" drafts from returned books have been recorded in TPS. This can be done by comparing the physical draft book received with the drafts listed in TPS using the "book inquiry" screen.

Destroy all drafts in partially used books and verify these drafts have been "voided" in TPS. (All unused drafts for terminated employees in partially used books should be voided).

Complete books should be re-assigned to other employees in TPS or unassigned and returned to Division inventory. (Use TPS maintenance function to perform this task).

51843 0539

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/rnbp0000

IV. Mini-Warehouses/Employee Garages

- All outside warehouses should be eliminated and contracts cancelled.
- Contact Sales Finance, Dennis Jacobs (ext. 1760) to deactivate vendors in TPS office expense.

V. Corporate Credit Cards

All Managers have American Express cards. Each employee is personally responsible for the American Express bill as these expenses have been reimbursed via expense report.

American Express cards for terminated employees should be cut in half and returned to Jeannette Cornelius (ext. 7597) in Sales Personnel for handling.

Employees at various levels have been issued AT&T calling cards. These cards are considered returnable property and should not be transferred from one employee to another.

For AT&T calling cards, contact Mary Reavis (ext. 2811) to have her cancel the cards with AT&T. Cards should be destroyed but do not need to be returned to Winston-Salem.

VI. Coupons

Update Coupon Management System (CMS) for all "in transit" items and employee resources.

Have all employees return coupons and verify with CMS balance. Document and investigate differences as appropriate.

Adjust employee inventories in CMS to actual.

Coupons can be transferred to other employees as business dictates. These transactions should be recorded in CMS. See CMS manual for detailed instructions.

51843 0540

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/rnbp0000

VII. Vehicles

Obtain vehicle keys and PH&H information (cards, registration, etc.) from the terminated employee.

- Realign Region/Division/Territory boundaries as appropriate with new personnel and Division number.
  - -- Car master system will identify vehicles as surplus/vacant.

- Fleet Operations will view, on-line, current mileage for vehicles assigned to driver as well as vacant/surplus vehicles.

- Fleet Operations will reassign low mileage vehicles to drivers with high mileage vehicles.
  - -- Vehicles no longer needed will be disposed of by Fleet Operations

- During the transition, Fleet Operations will make the assumption that vacant vehicles are to be considered surplus.

Do not offer a terminated employee the option to purchase their company car. If the question is asked, you can communicate the individual's request, in writing, to Larry Giddens, Fleet Operations, Fax # 919-741-6238. Surplus vehicles will not be identified until all reassignments are complete.

As information, relocated employees will be assigned the vacant/surplus vehicles that are registered in the new location.

- Contacts for further assistance:
  Larry Giddens, Fleet Operations, extension 0176
  Jan Faries, Fleet Operations, extension 3044

VIII. Personnel

Monitor LRS to ensure transferred and terminated employees are removed from input screens.

- If terminated employees appear, enter "no" pay for appropriate dates and advise Sales Personnel

To avoid problems entering expenses for transferred employees in SES, ensure department changes and vehicle assignments have been submitted to Winston-Salem.

When relocation is approved, provide transferring employees with relocation manual and initiate with Jeannette Cornelius.
